B. Visitors

Bill Henry came to follow up on the discussion he previously had with the council about purchasing his farmland near Matthews. He said he felt after the last conversation they had reached a deal on price and arrangements for purchase. Shortly after, he spoke with Mayor White about finding a renter to farm the land. Bill took a cash rent deal with Barry Aycock after thinking this was a done deal. He says he received a call later saying the city wanted to back out. The contract for the original deal was drawn up and sent to Attorney Hunter but after review did not stick to the original terms as far as interest and total price. This caused concern with the council, and they asked it to be adjusted to fit the original agreement. Bill was under the impression that this was the correct agreement and price despite the contract stating the city would pay interest, which they did not agree to do. In closing he wanted to confirm the rent money from this year was due to him which the Attorney Hunter said was true and he would need to get it from Barry directly since the city did not take any rent money on the land. The council also confirmed that they were out on the deal, and he was free to find another buyer.
